The AIG difference in action – Client case studies

Optimal client experience drives our execution and priorities

Issue

A UK client providing security solutions at multiple airports around the world required a policy to cover their global operation, whilst also providing local policies in specific domiciles on both a primary and excess basis.

Solution

AIG utilized its global network of experts to issue local policies in various locations, including territories with more complex regulations and restrictions. In turn the client was able to abide by local regulations and continue operations in these domiciles. This solution also facilitated local collection and booking of premium as required by the client.

Why is this important?

The client could evidence full coverage, meeting business needs and providing confidence that all of its exposures were covered under one program.

Issue

A U.S. aviation services provider needed multiple policies issued and invoiced prior to the effective date across several different countries.

Solution

AIG worked closely with the client to collect all necessary information in advance, enabling local offices to issue and invoice policies quickly and on time. The Client Brief was shared during the pre-bind phase, providing clear pre-bind regulatory, commercial and operational considerations.

Why is this important?

The client was clear from the outset of what was required to invoice and issue policies in a timely manner in each country, enabling efficient coordination and peace of mind. Timely issuance ensured the client could continue its global business operations with confidence and zero disruption.
